JOB DESCRIPTIONS BRING BUSINESSES TOGETHER

Accurate and current job descriptions serve as one of the most foundational elements to any business, aligning Compensation, Recruitment, Compliance and Leadership. Job descriptions serve as the key element to ensure talent is recruited, paid, grown and operates in a way that best serves the business and the individual. Compensation teams especially need the power of both compensation and job description technology to support accurate market pricing and a strong compensation philosophy.

COLLABORATE WITH KEY STAKEHOLDERS

Though Compensation often oversees the maintenance of job descriptions, the ongoing management of them is a team sport. It is important that job descriptions are easily accessible, workflows are flexible, and data moves throughout the right systems and right people at the right time.

- Eliminate user complexity and security risks with role-based security and workflow access.
- Collaborate in the way that makes the most sense for your organization using flexible workflows including mid-flow changes, bi-directional workflows, custom workflows and more.
- Have control over your job descriptions with version controls and audit trails.
- Utilize job descriptions for a variety of needs throughout the organization including integrated data feeds to third party systems such as HRIS platforms, Applicant Tracking Systems and Talent Management Platforms.

IMPROVE RECRUITING AND TALENT ENGAGEMENT

Finding the right talent centers around having the right job description and conducting the interview to align with that job description. That same job description should be used to pay and grow talent along the career ladder that shows progression over the tenure of an employee.

- Have confidence that you are paying talent in-line with the market by aligning compensation decisions with accurate job data
- Empower hiring managers with career ladders and interview guides tailored for each job
- Get interviews right with guides that accompany each job description and support interviewing teams with the questions to find the right talent for your team
- Support transparent employee development conversations with job description acknowledgements and clear career ladders.
